

AT2 Communications, Inc. Announces Sale of Integration Division To LAN-COMM Technologies, Inc.

PRESS RELEASE April 27, 2005 FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS—AT2 Communications, Inc. – Dba Advantage Telcom, announced today it has entered into an agreement for the sale of its Integration Division, to LAN-COMM Technologies, Inc.

LAN-COMM Technologies, Inc., will be based in San Antonio, Texas, and will be owned and operated by Ray Clark, formally Director Of Integration and Rod King, formally Director Of Engineering for the AT2 Integration Division for the past six years.

"This transaction is positive for both AT2 and LAN-COMM ," said John Stephenson, AT2's president and chief financial officer. The sale will allow each of us to focus completely on its core business, in AT2's case Wholesale Distribution to the Carrier space, and it will create expanded business opportunities for LAN-COMM in the integration to end-user space.

"Our Integration Division has been a profitable, well-managed component with outstanding teammates, and we appreciate the significant contribution they have made to our business for the past 6 years," Stephenson added.

Ray Clark CEO of LAN-COMM, adds: "we have developed a strong foothold in the VOICE, DATA, and VIDEO market place and presently service thousands of customers in an extraordinarily efficient manner. We believe there is an excellent opportunity for expansion and growth providing communication solutions for the workplace that reside primarily on the Local Area Network."

LAN-COMM Company president Rod King said, "We have thoroughly enjoyed the years spent with AT2, and are equally excited about the opportunities this change in ownership will create for our future. We see this event as very positive for our customers, supply partners and teammates."
